The seminar will review the tax basics for each topic, followed by a discussion of common and not-so-common planning strategies. These discussions will be supplemented with case studies and planning spreadsheets. One of the major objectives of the two-day course is to expose participants to as many tips and planning strategies as possible related to the major topics. Bootcamp registration also includes a presentation on “Ethics for the 21st Century Tax Professional” on August 24 from 8:00-9:40 am. The presentation will address the “real world” of tax preparation that many tax professionals frequently are engaged, how to respond and how to use Circular 230, Federal Code of Regulations to respond in difficult situations. Participants will embrace the part ethics plays in the profession of being a tax professional.

Beanna J. Whitlock, EA, CSA, owner of Whitlock Tax Service, LLC, will lead the ethics presentation. Whitlock teaches ethics and professional conduct before many professional groups and for the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). She also served as Director of National Public Liaison for the IRS in 2003 and 2004, responsible for IRS Commissioner relations with tax professionals, state and local governments and Congress.
